While this one didn't get a lot of hits, I solved the riddle.

Whales go to sea world. Sea world is in San Antonio Texas. Famously, this sea world housed the whale 'shamu' which contains the word sham. Sham refers to a falsification, as in fake. OP is suggesting that the whales at sea world are not real, and are instead a mass hallucination, likely caused by the unusually high amounts of DMT found in most Texas public water mains.

Edit; After getting replies to this 17 days later, I now believe the DMT issue is wider spread than I originally hypothesised

Dmt can't be orally activated without an MAOI, so high amounts in the water won't do anything.

We usually just buy our DMT in Texas, didn't know it's in the water for free 🤔

It may be a coincidence but north of the peninsula valdes there is a town called San Antonio (via google maps). Also, BAREfluke the whale went out past shag rock and around a place called South Georgia?

OPs latest post showed a room with a desk.. on the desk was a Tile box.

Tile: Finding made easy. Our Bluetooth-enabled devices and handy Tile app make everything findable

Maybe Ken was tracked?

I'm assuming this an homage to citadels shell companies in the Cayman Islands.

Have the whales stopped playing in GME? It's been trading differently/quietly for a couple weeks? Are they lying in wait? Have the left entirely?
